

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE CONVENTION OF THE NORTHERN NATIONS. The Great Lecture for the Year 1865. Delivered at the Church Royal Wharf, London, by J. S. STRACHEY, M.A., on the 21st of June. Price 12s. 6d.

The discourse contained in this small volume is intended to be a continuation of the author's previous course of lectures on the Convention of the Roman Empire. In the latter he treated of the preparation of the heathen world for the reception of Christianity; in the present work he traces "the progress of thought and opinion among the Christians themselves which led to the development of Nicene theology," and indicates how, when the Greek and Roman Churches had failed in their mission, they were cast down and replaced by new instruments of grace. It was, perhaps, an inevitable result of the purpose for which these lectures were prepared, that something of historical thoroughness and dignity should be sacrificed in them to rhetorical effect, and it is precisely in the oratorical style that Mr. Strachey appears to lead advantage. The discursive and reflective method which is pardonable, if not appropriate, in the pulpit, seems out of place in printed discourses which aspire, as these do, to a permanent place in historical literature.

VARIOUS NOVELS.

Were it not for the great, and we believe the growing popularity of George Eliot, we might well doubt, judging from the style of fiction which now has the largest number of imitators, whether we have made much progress in literature since. M. Victor Hugo alone, no less than $365,000. M. Poupart, the printer, has purchased their works, and contracts with authors. He is already in negotiation with M. Victor Hugo for a novel in 10 vols., just completed, and entitled "Ninety Three." M. Hugo asks $100,000 for it.

The Duties Law, however, is in its original form, in its proper place, in the body of the original acts. A knowledge of this work consists in its convenience for reference—the writer being himself its compiler. It contains the law entire, word for word, as the official copies; and it is not to be exceeded in value by the insertion of ranges when necessary. A CHARMING DAILY STORY.

By the author of "Lights and Shadows of Factory Life." This is a charming daily story, in a simple narrative form, but one of a character for above most of the kindred productions of the day. It displays an insight into human nature, and will in the judgment of many, be the best book of the year.
